TELLY TU'U

The work of Telly Tu'u, is characterised by a concentrated exploration of the limits, also the possibilities of painting. Tu'u created initially, expressive paintings of heightened colours which took on head like formations. Since then an increasingly abstract focus, interjected with the intermittent flat or figurative element.

The paintings concentrate on the vigorous force of the painting gesture, reverberating fully active fields that billow and tilt before your eyes. The paintings take on their own internal energy and atmosphere. Tu'u's painting shows and awareness of paintings traditions in a global context and draws on his own mixed ancestry, Tu'u puts together painting gestures as if structuring literature from a multitude of disparate languages, whilst exploring new directions in contemporary painting.

Tu'u is of Samoan, Chinese, Tokelau & Tuvalu descent and based in Sydney. He graduated with Postgraduate Honours from the University of Canterbury and studied at the University of Sydney, for a MFA. Tu'u has exhibited in New Zealand and Sydney, works included in Artbank collection, The James Wallace Arts Trust and the University of Canterbury collection.
